- Not much is going on

Connor

- Annual report done with Michael and David
- The Dean of Copenhagen School of Business, meeting with him
- Organizing everything for Kelowna

Canaccord Learning Commons

- Has two avenues – One initiative the funding is being used for is building space. The funding is also being used for an online space
- People are building a site that will be a one stop shop for people needing resources for school – get help they need and contribute material
- I have been approached to see if we should move some CUS materials onto the Canaccord site
- They want our case competition materials and they want the videos that the CMP is producing for first and second year level courses
- The school is consolidating content and making it easier for students to find resources

Executive Meeting Minutes October 25th, 2010

- We need to figure out what the CUS position will be in moving this information onto the site. We need to create a balance between Canaccord and maintaining our own autonomy.

Questions/Discussions

- Connor: We give students the opportunity to teach and give back, so if we have a bunch of paid people, they won't be providing as much
- Jeff: The fear that once we give it over to the school, we must know that things won't be changed. Canaccord wants to prove the positive impact that this site can have on the student body. The better the site is, the more funding they will receive.
- Jeff: The CUS offers a valuable opportunity that allows students to teach material to their peers, so if we delegate the task to Canaccord, they will have to refocus.
- Paulina: To add, I agree that there needs to be someone in charge, but I don't think that putting the digital material on the site will be more accessible to students.
- Paulina: If we had information about how to do a case, people will be more inclined to look at it.
- Jeff: The Canaccord would eventually like to take over the responsibility of teaching this material to students, and possibly hold internal case competitions.
- Connor: Will the site be private or is it public?
- Jeff: It will be open to all students, and I believe there will be CWL access to portions of the site.
- Paulina: I have been requested from them to send an invite to all the service council members, to contribute to a Wiki regarding the new Canaccord Learning Commons pages and site. I don't think this is appropriate to send to everyone on the service council.
- Jeff: I think we can find other ways to get feedback

End Time- 10:34
